■ Once the networks have established their new series—and that shouldn't take more than another week or two—we'll start seeing more of what this season is all about: specials.

The businesslike procedure is generally to give the regular series shows a chance to build ratings before starting to interrupt the weekly routine for special programs. That is especially important this season, when all three networks are risking large sums of money on specials, money which must be provided, at least in part, by successful series programs.

■ Last season's specials pulled such large audiences that networks found many advertisers willing to sponsor this season's special programs. As the economics of the business go, however, in most cases the advertisers don't put up quite enough money to cover all the expenses and many specials come in at a loss. The time will come—we hope—when this will no longer be true and networks will find specials as economically sound as weekly series programs.

This happy day will come at the discretion of the audience. The more viewers watch specials, the more networks can ask from advertisers; and while we are not especially concerned with how much money network stockholders make, we are most eager to bring as much variety as possible to television programming. Variety cannot come in the form of specials until specials are profitable.

■ We once again urge you to give the specials a chance. And we strongly suggest that if you enjoy one, tell somebody about it—such as the network or the sponsor. If you don't know the address, write your letter to the name of the special, c/o TV Guide Viewer Service, Box 800, Radnor, Pa. 19088, and we will forward it to the people in charge of the show.

DO TV CAMERAS ADD FUEL TO RIOT FLAMES?

America is taking a long, sober look at television coverage of violence in the streets

BY NEIL HICKEY

A new law of television journalism is emerging in the atmosphere of civil protest, picketing, parades, demonstrations, labor strikes and the broad spectrum of public expression of discontent which has become a central aspect of American life in the last several years, and—more immediately—in the violent summer we have just weathered.

Stated most starkly, the law is: "Television, by its very presence, creates news."

Never before today has the law been more operative. Only in recent months have legislators, police officials and TV newsmen come to a suspicion of the full impact of television upon the news it is covering; of TV's power to shape events it chooses to record; of the medium's rather frightening capability of creating a cause, a public figure or a news story where—but for the cameras—none might otherwise exist.

The charge sheet against TV news is shaping up this way:

- That the presence of cameras frequently transmutes a potentially violent situation into an actually violent one, and that mischief-makers often show their most troublesome selves at the sight of television crews.
- That TV pictures of looting, destruction and mayhem create a contagion—far more so than radio or newspaper reports—which causes riots to feed upon themselves.
- That TV stations and networks give too much time to the flashier and more vocal extremists—such as Stokely Carmichael and H. Rap Brown—whose words foster violence, and not enough to the less theatrical but saner voices of moderation.
- That pressure groups of all types have become extremely "savvy" in manipulating television by staging protests and parades specifically for the cameras and thereby achieving an inflated importance for their private, special pleading.

These are only a few of the complaints—some of which have been denied by broadcasting executives—being aimed at TV news in the current controversy. TV Gume asked Detroit police commissioner Ray Girardin about the effects of television's presence in his city during this summer's terrible strife in which 43 people died. His response was firm and unequivocal: "The showing of films of scenes from riot-torn areas seemed to arouse the curiosity of hundreds of people who wanted to see for themselves what was happening. Almost immediately, the streets were crowded with curiosity-seekers hampering law-enforcement officers.

"TV could have performed a civic duty," Girardin added, "by informing people to stay away from the dangerous sections. Many innocent people were injured and some killed by snipers because they wandered into the troubled areas to see the action."

Police officials in Newark, another scene of recent strife, are similarly disturbed about TV's riot coverage: "We were very disappointed by the behavior of TV crews," a spokesman says. "Doubly so since we had called a meeting as far back as June 23 and invited about 20 news organizations—both local and national—to discuss an informal 'code of ethics' for reporting trouble, should any arise. Three attended the meeting."

Sen. John McClellan (D., Ark.) plans to include testimony on TV's riot coverage in hearings currently in progress before his Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations.

Congressman Torbert Macdonald (D., Mass.), chairman of the Communications Subcommittee, also is eager to call TV industry executives to Washington for hearings on the medium's capacity for exacerbating troublesome situations and creating new ones. Congressman Macdonald told us: "I'm not saying that Congress should interfere, but I wonder about the wisdom of what TV does in this area. Is it really news if one Negro gets up and shouts, 'Burn Whitey'? I'd like to find out if the networks and stations have policies on these matters and what instructions they give their reporters."

The disturbances in the streets amount to rebellion, Macdonald added. "I'd like to know if this rebellion is being fed by television and radio. Television may have to take a share of the blame for spreading dangerous doctrines. I'd like to find out what steps they're taking to live up to their responsibility to their audiences."

Sen. Hugh Scott (R., Pa.) entered the controversy on Aug. 2 with a statement that he was "greatly concerned about the newspaper and radio and television coverage of the recent riots and civil disturbances throughout the country. I believe that the news media, in many instances, inadvertently contributed to the turmoil."

That salvo elicited return fire from all three networks. Dr. Frank Stanton, president of CBS, Inc., insisted that "so far as the news presented over our radio and television networks . . . goes, I can find no evidence that this is true. On the contrary, there is considerable evidence that the exact opposite is the case." At the same time Stanton admitted that "serious problems" attend television's handling of civil disorder and that his own news officials had been duly warned of the "unsettling effect on a stimulated crowd that the presence of cameras may have."

NBC president Julian Goodman echoed Stanton's disfavor of any "code of emergency procedure" (as suggested by Scott) that might impinge upon TV's freedom to cover the news as it sees fit. "... A code cannot exercise judgment," said Goodman. "It cannot foresee all the variables in the fast-breaking events with which newsmen must deal."

Another quick response to Scott's statement came from James C. Hagerly, vice president of American Broadcasting Companies. In a "Dear Hugh" letter, Hagerly defended his network's news practices while adding that the whole subject has "been a matter of continuing concern to all of us here . . . . The danger that news coverage can influence or inflame an event is foremost in our thoughts."

Other criticism of TV news has come from pundits and private-interest groups. Columnist Max Lerner says: "Americans seem to have struck a Faustian bargain with the big media, by which they have received total and instant coverage and have in turn handed themselves over to the vulnerable chances of crowd psychology and of instant infection."

Henry Lee Moon, public relations chief of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People told TV GUME: "Negroes have generally been unhappy about the way television has played their affairs. It's damaging to the cause of civil rights to give a forum to somebody shouting 'Kill Whitey' and cast him as a Negro leader when he represents no substantial part of the Negro population."

TV newsmen are as sensitive as anybody else to such dangers. ABC News executive William Sheehan says that he thinks "it's no coincidence that the flourishing of the civil-rights movement has occurred at the same time that television news has reached the point where every evening it literally saturates the country with reports on world happenings."

Another TV executive recalls that during the AFTRA strike of last March, when TV reporters were idle for two weeks, a sharp diminution in protests and picketing for peace and other causes was apparent. "Nothing seemed to be happening," he says. Then the TV news directors realized that—in the absence of cameras—the protestors had concluded it was pointless to mount a protest.

TV people become aware of their own influence in a variety of ways. Cindy Adams, a glamorous reporter for WABC-TV in New York, recalls the time she accepted a telephone call in her newsroom and was informed that a private group planned a demonstration at the Dominican Republic's UN mission headquarters to protest U.S. involvement in that country's affairs. "Can you cover it?" asked the lady caller.

"Well, I'm not sure," Cindy said. "How many of you will there be?"

"How many do you need?" the woman answered.

A bit startled, Cindy replied that it wasn't exactly her place to say. "What time will you be demonstrating?" the reporter then asked.

"Maybe right away. That suit you?"

"Well, we have no crews here right now," said Cindy.

"We'll have as many marchers as you want out there any time you say," the caller assured her. WABC did indeed cover the demonstration, moving Cindy Adams to recall recently: "That woman knew what she was doing; she was savvy in the ways of TV news." An increasing number of social and political activists are learning that it is possible to manipulate TV news to their own interests.

Similarly, TV people have been known to attempt the manipulation of an incipient news story to their own interests. When James Meredith was testing the University of Mississippi's exclusion policy, a potentially volatile situation grew out of the student body's tension and anger over his presence. A TV reporter from a Southwestern station drove onto the campus one day, hoping for some exciting newsfilm, and was disappointed that the students' mood seemed taut but controlled. He leaned from his car and shouted to a group of them: "Hey! Where's the action? I heard there was action going on around here!"

That triggered them. First, they turned the newsman's car over and burned it, sending him scrambling; the violence spread from there. At the end of it, two men were dead.

Many observers are sure that TV news (as well as newspapers) fanned the embers which erupted into the bitter riots of the Harlem and Bedford-Stuyvesant section of New York in the summer of 1964. During spring and early summer, almost daily interviews with "Negro leaders" predicting a holocaust were visible on television. Many of these men were spokesmen without a following, ambitious activists eager for exposure. But their words created an air of tension and expectancy, convincing the ghetto dwellers that violence was indeed imminent. Nobody was surprised when it came.

In Los Angeles in 1965, mobile TV vans moved into riot areas of Watts and showed live pictures of looting even before the police had arrived. A police official remembers: "Television served as a terrific guide for potential looters who wanted to know where to go for some action."

Still, there's no gainsaying that TV reporters as a class are well aware of the effect of their presence on an evolving story. We asked a number of network correspondents—experienced in coverage of street demonstrations—for their thoughts:

• Tom Jarriel, ABC: "There's no doubt that a camera causes pickets to act up more vigorously. They know the power of TV exposure; all these people want their story told. The camera is an attraction. The problem is to keep it from becoming a bigger story than the one you're covering."

"We often leave our cameras on the seat of the car and stand to one side while a situation is developing. When something actually happens, we film it."

Jarriel feels that the TV presence also can have a moderating influence. "I doubt that James Meredith would have completed his most recent march in Mississippi unmolested if the cameras hadn't been there. People didn't heckle him; they stayed away so as not to cause a major incident on nation-wide TV."

• John Laurence, CBS: "More trouble is caused by young and inexperienced wire-service reporters than by TV men. They can make a quick phone call and in minutes a bulletin is going out on their wires. The presence of a TV camera often tends more to keep a situation honest than to aggravate it. If a camera is on a policeman and his prisoner, chances are the policeman won't beat the prisoner and the prisoner won't attack the policeman."

• Don Oliver, NBC: "Once a public disturbance has begun, cameras have very little effect on its progress, but in the early stages—where the possibility for violence exists—the sight of a TV crew can have a bad effect. Police and TV people work well together most of the time; but as a riot goes into its third or fourth day, the police get edgy and angry and start feeling that the cameras are drawing attention to them."

• Bill Matney, NBC: "Cameras have very little effect while a disturbance is actually going on. In Detroit, I interviewed two fellows while they were actually looting, and later filmed their arrest. On one day, while whole sections of the city were going up in smoke, the TV people refrained from reporting it so as not to make it worse. That was an independently-arrived-at decision by the local stations."

CBS's Midwest bureau manager, Dan Bloom, had the job of setting up that network's riot coverage in a number of cities during the summer. "It boils down to the fact that the equipment is sometimes a magnet," he says. "But our policy is simple. If a reporter has any suspicion that a performance is going on just for the camera, we immediately pack up and move away. This is rigidly enforced. On the other hand, if you have a peaceful demonstration that goes on for 60 minutes and a bomb is thrown in the last two minutes, where is the story? We'd be remiss if we didn't put that part of the action on the air. We make a very deliberate attempt at setting the proper balance."

Before this past summer, many TV newsmen were understandably reluctant to admit television's influence on evolving news, but the proliferation of protests and riots, as well as the thoughtful criticism of lawmakers and private citizens, are forcing the subject onto center stage, where it must now be examined in full public view, and some firm conclusions arrived at. CBS News president Richard S. Salant, for example, admits, "It is certainly true that a great many events—almost all except tornadoes—are, at least to some degree, designed in time or in place or even in nature for all of the mass media. . . . But our job is to report news, not to shape it."

And there are no easy, self-executing rules applicable to all situations, Salant adds. "We know that one cannot simply ignore these events because indeed they are news. And we have come to the conclusion, then, that the wise policy is a policy of restraint and awareness of what the problems are."

For the last several years, the U.S. Justice Department's Community Relations Service has been working quietly in cities across the country getting TV people together with police officials and helping them agree on voluntary guidelines for the reporting of civil disorders. Together, they've come up with solid recommendations aimed at keeping good order in the streets while not raising the ugly specter of censorship. Scores of TV stations have agreed to:

- Hold off reporting mass violence until police establish some modicum of control.
- Use unmarked cars, hand-held cameras, no bright lights, and expose the cameras to public view only when there's something to film.
- Avoid reporting rumors, trivia and wild statements.
- Use command posts set up by police in strife areas as clearinghouses for news breaks, and not cruise about the streets aimlessly.
- Refrain from using the word "riot" unless there's simply no other word to describe what's happening.

The networks and many local stations try to do many of these things out of common sense, and not from official nudging. But it's apparent that no guidelines nor agreements can replace the dispassion and detachment of a seasoned TV newsmen who is determined to convey—soberly and untheatrically—the full sense of a public disorder; whose eye is not upon competing newsmen nor on the aggrandizement of his own reputation; and who is sensitive to the effect of his words upon an anxious audience.

A part of television's difficulty in this area is inherent in the nature of the medium and will never be absolved altogether. But the opinion is now abroad that networks and stations must do a great deal more than they're doing to ensure that the medium 1) does not alter the shape of events it touches and 2) does not let itself be manipulated by the show-business appeal of special pleaders.

It is apparent that the adaptation of rigid "codes" is not the answer. But, if, indeed, television's self-generating potential for news is an operative unwritten "law" of broadcast journalism, it is a law in need of prompt and drastic—unwritten but nonetheless effective—amendment.

BY ROBERT MUSEL

"Hey, Granny!" yelled the tourists in front of London's Houses of Parliament. "What are you doing here?"

"Same as you're doing," shouted Granny, leaning from the window of her limousine.

But it wasn't quite the same thing. There was a camera car up ahead with Granny in focus and she was gawking at the sights of London strictly on cue from cameraman Harry Wolf. What the tourists should have asked was why Irene Ryan and the rest of the Beverly Hillbillies were in London in the first place.

For those who haven't guessed, the answer is that a show starting its sixth season usually needs a miracle to recapture whatever it was that made it a hit in the first place. When this crisis arises, there is a formula so widely followed it must be written down somewhere in a handbook for producers: You mix in a change of scenery, preferably international, in the hope The Leaning Tower of Pisa or the Arc de Triomphe will help postpone the inevitable.

Some months ago a moment arrived in the Filmways spread in Hollywood when the question of "a shot in the arm" (I quote) for the series began to germinate in the mind of producer Paul Henning. "I thought to myself," said Henning, "what if Jed Clampett inherits a castle? We needed something new to start the sixth season and here it was. From that sprang a whole series of situations that sounded funny for the Hillbillies."

And so it came to pass that Scotland Yard got the word that a large young man was acting most oddly in front of Buckingham Palace. He was pouring a bucket of water on the pavement before the great iron gates, putting his jacket over the puddle, shouting something about Sir Walter Raleigh and declaring his intention to wait for the Queen to emerge.

A pretty girl, all pink and blonde like a strawberry confection, was with him. And so was I, among the small group of cameramen, technicians and stand-ins watching Jethro (Max Baer) and Elly May (Donna Douglas) rehearsing in the clear light of early morning. A little later three police squad cars pulled up.

Production manager George King, a cinch for the diplomatic corps if he ever quits films, explained to the police what was going on and displayed his permission to film. But this being England, it turned out that the strip of pavement directly in front of the gates was controlled by the Palace itself, not the civic authorities, and Jethro would have to do his Sir Walter Raleigh act to the right or to the left of the entrance.

Director Joe Depew gravely agreed—and why not? He had already filmed all of the scene he needed in front of the gates.

One of the stipulations London authorities made for shooting outside the Palace was that it take place as early as possible to keep down the crowds, like those that had quickly gathered by the hundreds when the Hillbillies had earlier filmed at a drugstore near London Airport. The sight of Granny and Jed (Buddy Ebsen) in costume being driven up to the store by Jethro and Elly May attracted so many people that King and his crew were worried police would intervene.

"Did you see them mob and holler at us?" beamed Miss Ryan. "The remarkable thing about this show is that even though it hasn't been on the air here for two years, they know us and remember our lines. They were shouting: 'Hey Granny, where's your jug?' and 'Did you bring your shotgun with you?' and 'Where's the old car?'"

"The elevator operators at the hotel [the de-luxe Dorchester] even talk hillbilly to us. One of them said to me: 'Are you-all goin' down to the fo'th flo', ma'am?' I had to break up."

King spent a long time looking for a suitable castle for Jed to inherit and picked 600-year-old Penshurst Place, one of the most historic state-ly homes in the kingdom (King Henry VIII dined there and later beheaded his host). When word that the Beverly Hillbillies themselves would be at Penshurst reached the near-by town of Tonbridge, scores of schoolchildren in their school uniforms were brought over by teachers for a well-disciplined look at the famous TV figures.

According to the story line Jed decides to return to the United States after paying off $10,000,000 in death duties on the castle and guaranteeing the staff their jobs, which, as Henning said, leaves the way open for another sequence in England if this one should work.

MERMAN of the Back in '46 Ethel Merman began shooting (in Irving Berlin's "Annie Get Your Gun"). She's been doing some occasional shooting ever since (she returned as "Annie" in New York and on tour last year, and did the show on television last March). So it's not at all odd to expect her to show up on television armed and ready. In her upcoming guest appearance on Tarzan she plays a widow lady who is leading a group of hippies, "flower people" and the like, into the wilderness to escape nasty old civilization. Naturally they encounter that greatest of all civilization-escapers himself, Lord Greystoke, the King of the Apes. And of course the doughty little band encounters hostile natives, the usual surly lot found skulking about the jungly tendrils in this sort of thing, but in this case mounted on horses. (For the curious and suspicious of mind, this particular episode is really a transplanted Western, with the natives acting very much like Injuns.) Tarzan saves the day, but not until Miss Merman has blazed away apace. The scenes were shot near Durango, Mexico—a four-hour flight hippies ride into the wilderness.

JUNGLE

from Mexico City—where Miss Merman found "... all kinds of things creeping and crawling, but it wasn't too bad." Her friends sniggered at the thought of Ethel swinging from branch to branch (how about that voice for a Tarzan-type holler?), but she explained that it wasn't going to be like that at all. "... That's not what this Tarzan is. It's a fine dramatic series, and I want to get out of my groove, change types — stop being identified as just a singer." To which we can only add a kreegah and two bundolos!

THE DOAN REPORT

Missouri Edition

Broadcast Lab to Do Live Drama

Those live-live, two-hour telecasts Sunday nights on most of the Nation's educational TV stations later this fall won't be all news and hashing-over of current affairs. Drama sometimes will be offered, and "at least" four programs in the 26-week series will be "total drama," says Av Westin, director of the $10-million Ford Foundation-financed Public Broadcast Laboratory which will produce the experimental outings. "One of our mandates," Westin noted, "is to show what Public Television can be. We're going to bring back live TV, and we may bring back live drama, too!" While the country at large will not begin sampling Public Broadcast Laboratory's efforts until Nov. 5, Chicago will get a preview this Sunday (Sept. 17). WTTW there helped produce a PBL dry-run last month, featuring a moving probe of Chicago race relations, and PBL has decided to let the station air the tape. "It will leave the viewers wrung out," Westin promised.

Last March when AFTRA, the performers' union, struck the TV networks, Walter Cronkite's role on the evening news was tackled by a CBS News executive named Arnold Zenker. Unlike many another nonperforming hand called upon for awkward on-camera duty, Zenker, a onetime radio personality in Wilmington, Del., slid comfortably into the TV anchor-man's routine and was easily the hit of the pro-tem performers. The taste of fame has lingered and finally has overcome him. He is resigning as manager of program administration at CBS News to become pivot man for WBZ-TV's (Boston) prime news hour.

Daytimes, ABC is the fun-and-games network. Such frivolities as The Newlywed Game, The Dating Game and Dream Girl have so charmed the *Hausfrau*s that two more half-hours of this genre will be launched Oct. 2. One, titled Temptation, will pit a trio of housewives in a guessing match as to which of three items of merchandise each thinks the other two will want most. "The whole theme is tension," promises Ed Vane, ABC's daytime programmer. "It really gets narcotic." The other entry is a thing called How's Your Mother-in-Law?, described by Vane simply as "pure fun." Being dropped: Dateline: Hollywood and The Honeymoon Race, the latter a game, to be sure, but apparently short on pure fun.

Briefly: CBS News expects to come up with two or three of those viewer-quiz hours this season. So far, a current-events test is booked for Jan. 9. A winter-driving test is being talked of for December . . . the word from Capitol Hill is that there will be no relaxation of the equal-time requirements during the 1968 political campaigns. Also, a Senate inquiry has determined that there is no need to curb election-night vote projections by the networks.

A MATTER OF TASTE

Mrs. Helen Feingold is totally wrong when she says Swiss fondue is made out of Emmentaler Swiss cheese ["It's Fun, It's Fast, It's Fondue," Sept. 2]. No self-respecting Swiss would use it. It is made out of Gruyère cheese, which is much fatter and has practically no holes. She also forgot a liqueur glass of kirsch before serving. This is cherry brandy which originated in Switzerland.

Madame Simone Jaquier
Williamsport, Pa.

[TV GUIDE's food consultant says she used Emmentaler because Gruyère may not be available. She omitted kirsch because some do not like it.—ED.]

THOSE YOUNG ACTORS

Re Joy Wyse's Aug. 26 article, "My Sons, the Actors." What about her children? Did they choose to become actors, or, like most children, were they forced into it to satisfy their parents? Mrs. Wyse also neglected to mention that because of the tremendous competition for jobs, kids are forced to be nice to people they don't like, and even to lie if it means "getting the job." Having represented children and cast them in shows, the above, I'm sad to say, is true.

CHEERS FOR THE FUGITIVE

The people who made The Fugitive have just restored my faith in human nature. "Why," I proclaimed long and loud to all who would listen, "waste time on something that will never have a climax? They will milk it down to the very last Nielsen, and then just dump it." And now the Powers-That-Be have gone and done it. They have just brought a long-running series to a grand and glorious finale! I now stand, with my soapbox tucked abjectly under my arm, in humble apology for everything I've said against The Fugitive.

DEFINITION

I feel that you should be reprimanded for your display of gross ignorance of contemporary teen-age ideologies in your Aug. 26 article, "It Happened in Monterey." I am appalled at the way you and many others of your peers misuse the word "teenybopper" to encompass every member of the younger generation. A "teenybopper" is a person who may well be a teen-ager according to age, but he is not accepted by older, more mature teen-agers. The "coming-of-age," so to speak, is in most cases some time after age 15.

Tim Taylor
London, Ont.

[Our expert contends "teenybopper" refers to both an age and a state of being. As a generic term, it describes the subculture which forms the basis of hard-rock, acid-rock, folk-rock players and aficionados.—ED.]

WHAT A WAY TO GO! (NBC), Saturday
THE GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH (ABC), Sunday
SEND ME NO FLOWERS (NBC), Tuesday
PARADISE, HAWAIIAN STYLE (ABC), Wednesday
THE APARTMENT (CBS), Thursday
THE MAN WHO SHOT LIBERTY VALANCE (CBS), Friday

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

At very least it's a star-studded week for us, with all the big glamor names supplemented by that all-time bonanza, that classic "for children of all ages" three-ringer, Cecil B. DeMille's "The Greatest Show on Earth."

DeMille's circus movie hasn't been surpassed in its lavish exposition of the thousands involved in the colorful, sprawling, glittering sawdust world of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey organization. Betty Hutton and Cornel Wilde, as a pair of competitive aerialists, and Charlton Heston, as a hard-bitten manager, provide the romantic triangle that carries the plot.

Another auspicious film premiere is that of "The Apartment," 1960's Oscar-winner that boasts the wit and ruthless cynicism of Billy Wilder's co-authorship and direction. I think you may find the cynicism predominant in what boils down to a romance between a girl of small principle and a young man of just as little principle. Charming as Shirley MacLaine and Jack Lemmon make the pair, and sticky-sweet and moral as the ending may be, it's ultimately an unpleasant, albeit fascinating, film.

Shirley MacLaine addicts can pursue her charms further in "What a Way to Go!"—a great big, lavish, affluent, star-studded box-office-oriented comedy that, irony of ironies, is an attempted spoof of our great big, lavish, affluent, star-studded box-office-oriented society. It starts out well-above average but steadily declines under the weight of too much MacLaine, too many noncomedians, too many sets and too many costumes and too many repetitions of its one joke, a joke that the passing years haven't freshened. Nor is there any refreshment in the basic joke (if such it be) of "Send Me No Flowers," one of those excruciating Doris Day-Rock Hudson domestic rib-ticklers, this one involving the hilarious notion that any moment hubby might drop dead. It does succeed, however, in presenting unadulterated dullness, relieved by neither taste nor intelligence.

You can get the tastelessness of these last two items out of your mouth by munching on the solidities of "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance." It's plain, substantial, wholesome fare, an uninspired but yeoman John Ford Western. It's a bit on the murky and windy side in production and procedure. It does boast the yeoman services of James Stewart and John Wayne as solid types with good sound feelings for Vera Miles, a yeoman-type heroine. And there's a tinge of flavor to be derived from Lee Marvin, who plays the villainous Valance with maniacal fervor. And if you want goo on top of the bland white bread, it's there for spreading in "Paradise, Hawaiian Style," a last year's Presley flick that all but his fans will confuse with his 1961 "Blue Hawaii." In this one there's a cute little girl who sings.

8 COLOR FLYING FISHERMAN

5:00 6 10 12 13 21ST CENTURY

COLOR The next century will find many doctors doubling as nuclear scientists. The reason: atomic medicine, a new science that seeks to harness the atom for medical diagnosis and treatment. Animated films show how radioactive isotopes circulate through the body to pinpoint diseased organs. Films taken at Oak Ridge and Brookhaven laboratories show how the isotopes are made, how their "tracings" are recorded by supersensitive cameras and how the findings are used by doctors. Interviewed: Dr. Victor Bond (Brookhaven), and Dr. Glenn Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission. Walter Cronkite is the host.

8 COWBOY IN AFRICA—Adventure

DEBUT Jim Sinclair and his Navajo sidekick John Henry join forces with Wing commander Hayes, an African game rancher who is determined to prove that wild-animal ranching is Africa's best defense against the ravages caused by uncontrolled cattle grazing. Filmed in Africa and at Africa U S A (in California) Sinclair: Chuck Connors Commander Hayes Ronald Howard. John Henry: Tom Nar-dini. (60 min.)

8:00 8 10 12 10:15 8 MOVIE—Drama

The Greatest Show on Earth

Betty Hutton and James Stewart

COLOR Cecil B. DeMille abandoned the biblical epics for the big top to film this 1952 circus extravaganza.

As in most of DeMille's films, the spectacle—not the play—is the thing. The action centers on a circus manager's struggles with poor attendance, a love affair, temperamental performers and a clown who's trying to hide his past.

The film, three years in the making, includes performances by some of the great circus acts of the time. It won the Academy Award as best picture and earned for DeMille his only Oscar nomination as a director.

Cast

Literary Guild of America, Inc.
Dept. 79-VTE, Garden City, N. Y. 11530

Please enroll me as a trial member of the Literary Guild and send me the FOUR books or sets whose numbers I have printed in the four boxes at right. Bill me only $1 plus shipping and handling for all four. If not delighted, I may return them in 10 days and this membership will be canceled.

I do not need to accept a book every month — only as few as four a year — and may resign any time after purchasing four books. All selections and alternates will be described to me in advance in the Guild's free monthly "Preview," and a convenient form will always be provided for my use if I do not wish to receive a forthcoming selection. You will bill me the special Guild price for each book I take. This will always be at least 40%, often as much as 60%, below the price of the publisher's edition. (A modest charge is added for shipping and handling.) For each four monthly selections or alternates I accept, I may choose a free bonus book from the special bonus catalog.

If you join the Guild now, and agree to accept only four selections or alternates during the coming year.

WOULDN'T you rather pay $3.50 instead of $6.95 for a new best-seller? Savings of 50% on the new books you want are typical when you're a member of the Literary Guild. In fact, you are always guaranteed savings of 40% to 60% from the prices of the publishers' editions.

Recently, for example, Guild members were offered such new best-sellers as The Arrangement for $3.50 instead of $6.95 in the publisher's edition, The Chosen for $2.95 instead of $4.95.

Each month, members receive the Guild's free Preview which describes new selections like these in advance of publication. In all, Preview offers 20 or more books every month — among which you'll find the greatest variety of outstanding new books offered by any book club.

You need not take a book a month — only as few as four during the coming year. And for every four you buy, you may choose a free bonus book.

The Apartment

Director Billy Wilder's 1960 comedy of morals takes a caustic view of office politics

At a large Manhattan insurance firm, ambitious C. C. Baxter learns how to succeed without really trying, by lending his apartment to his philandering bosses. Baxter's problems: a nagging conscience and his involvement with a popular elevator girl.

Nominated for 10 Oscars, the film won four: best picture, direction (Wilder), story and screenplay (Wilder and J. A. L. Diamond), and art direction of Romeo and Juliet*

SPECIAL COLOR "Bell's" first show of the season features stars of the theater, opera, ballet and musical stage in interpretations of the ancient love story of Romeo and Juliet.

Theater. Jason Robards and Claire Bloom present a concert reading of the balcony scene from Shakespeare's play, which is perhaps the most famous version of the tale.

Ballet. A pas de deux by Italy's Carla Fracci and Denmark's Erik Bruhn, who choreographed it. They performed it in May at New York's Lincoln Center, where Rudolf Nureyev hailed Bruhn's technique as "too good to be believed."

Opera. Soprano Anna Moffo and tenor Sandor Konya of the Met sing excerpts from Gounod's "Roméo et Juliette."

Musical stage. Carol Lawrence and Larry Kert re-create their roles from the Broadway hit "West Side Story," a contemporary version of the romance.

BURR for the PROSECUTION

Perry Mason
may have become Robert Ironside
but the man-killing schedule
remains the same

BY C. ROBERT JENNINGS

Burr with Ironside's Barbara Anderson and Don Galloway.

Like a great gray whale before a whipping wind, the wheel-chair-borne actor scudded across cable-car rails glinting in a sunshine day. The wounded eyes protruded from the vast hulk familiarly. But what on earth was Perry Mason, of all people, doing in a wheel chair, of all things, chasing criminals around San Francisco's cable-car barn, of all places?

After nine years of saving people from the gas chambers, Perry Mason has mutated into Robert Ironside, who puts people in them. Or, in his own writ: "In Ironside, I've switched from the defense to the prosecution, playing a legendary police detective who becomes a crime consultant following permanent injury by a sniper's bullet, which confines him to a wheel chair. There's more latitude for showing a human being because he is not tied down to a courtroom."

He is still tied down to the same merciless schedule, however; and as this was the sixth and final day of shooting on an early episode of the series, there was the usual speculation about working late. Coming out of a production huddle like an overage fullback, Ray Burr sighed hugely, scratched his short gray crop, manufactured a couple of dozen autographs—"For my wife, Mr. Mason," "Thanks, Mr. Mason"—and greeted the visitor warmly.

"I'm afraid I'm the guy who's going to ruin your evening," I said. (I was going to interview him over dinner.)

"No. I'm going to ruin yours!" he retorted.

"If you have to work past 8 o'clock," I said, "you might see a drunk writer."

"If I have to work past 8 o'clock," he replied, "you will see a drunk actor." And suddenly the melancholy and splendidly jowled face gave way to an arch, Tony-Curtis, Bad-Little-Boy look which was in turn fragmented by a huge, hail-fellow laugh; and now he seemed like no one so much as Jim Backus, or Henry VIII. I remembered what a friend and former Burr associate had confided: "Inside that big man is not your usual thin one crying to escape, but a nice, chubby, giggly and troubled child."

Fortunately for us both, Ray Burr was jettisoned from the set around 6:30 P.M., making it a mere 14-hour workday, counting his usual pre-dawn perusal of the script. I found him hunched over a Dubonnet cocktail in a serenely elegant restaurant, the darkness of which did nothing to daunt those ubiquitous seekers of "Mr. Mason's" signature. He smiled upon them now like some benign war lord. Was he so thrilled by it all?

"I've given a good deal of my life to pleasing people," he said evenly, "and I'm glad they're still pleased; and there's satisfaction in the knowledge I'm going strong still. But 'thrilled' is not the word I'd use." Present beanery excepted, he remarked that he had "eaten some of the worst food and paid some of the highest prices for it" just to evade this bottomless sea of fans—which, he avers, "you cannot avoid by being rude."

A rude Ray Burr would be as rare as the Hay Diet. Indeed, he not only embraces his common humanity with uncommon force, he likes human beings—two vastly different things. And he proves it by giving of himself tirelessly and not talking too much about it. If pressed, he mumbles into the Olympia oysters something indecipherable about his numberless charities; and only under duress will he tell you about the four children, none of his own, plus the handful of relatives, that he supports wholly; and the 23 foster children to whose care he contributes mightily. But he would prefer touting a peppercorn steak or a 1961 Meursault; or having you share his own after-dinner concoction, Tia Maria cum Grand Marnier.

His 12 trips to Korea and 10 to Vietnam are now familiar matters of public record, but for a long time he would slip quietly into Saigon two or three times a year, visit thousands of servicemen in the remotest areas, and permit no publicity to boost his ratings. It was, and is, a deeply personal and passionate communion. "He always preferred to listen to our gripes rather than to gab about Perry Mason," remembers a gunner who flew with him, adding, "We all think Ray Burr is one helluva fellow."

Why? What's in it for Ray, who once boasted of having "very little ego" to massage? "It's nice to be as important to other people as they are to you," he says, fully aware that a few cynics see him as a damn fool. "I certainly have an ego, but I don't have the kind of ego that demands constant attention. I lived alone a good many years—and I don't like it. But I can do my own cooking and my own gardening and shine my own shoes and dig my own ditches. But if I dug a good ditch, I'd like someone to say that's a pretty good ditch."

He is understandably proud to have been "the first entertainer in Vietnam and Eniwetok. The Bob Hope show's fine, but they can't get to the men and the men can't get to them. Isolation is just as bad as combat, and attention is necessary. I've got a reputation in Vietnam second to none because I've covered so many places..."

Currently, he is covering many places back home—the minds and hearts of victims of cerebral palsy, cancer, multiple sclerosis, racial discrimination and ghetto poverty; and already he is as involved in the agonies of paraplegics, addressing disabled veterans on weekends, as he was in promoting peace through world law, during the years when he was playing Perry Mason.

But compulsive do-gooders wield a two-edged sword, and a former Burr press agent bleeds from the dull side. "Ray takes it all so damn seriously. He'll really become this guy Ironside just like he really became Perry Mason. When he began addressing the bar groups, I thought 'Wow!—this is insane!' Then he began to resent the fact people called him Perry Mason and not Raymond Burr." Adds another detractor, "If I want to hear about Vietnam, I'll listen to James Reston, not some actor."

While he suffers from what Ibsen called "integrity fever," Ray is not merely "some actor." A man given alternately to dour soul-searching and giddy tomfoolery (he's a notorious prankster), to deep despair and high-octane cheer, Ray Burr at 50 is a formidable professional. "I've always felt acting a very honorable profession," says Burr. "To be a good actor makes you knowledgeable about many things, and you have to learn a lot about human nature to be one."

Raymond William Stacy Burr learned the hard way: earning 25 cents a day on a New Mexico sheep ranch; selling tinted photographs door to door; singing in a Paris boite; watching parades at his military academy from the bench because his porkiness would "break up the military line"; enduring the heartbreak of parental separation; losing his first wife in an airplane disaster, his second in the divorce courts, his third and last to cancer, and his only son to leukemia.

Burr's co-workers impute to him the hoary old cliché, "actor's actor," but he is in hard fact the actor's job. And for every soul wound there's a fleshly scar: he has been bitten by a rattlesnake, thrown by a horse, torpedoed in the Atlantic, shot in the gut on Okinawa, mined in Vietnam, torn up in a helicopter accident, hospitalized uncountable times for malaria, laryngitis, typhoid and two kinds of hepatitis, and operated on nine times, two of them for polyps in the stomach. As Collier Young, Ironside's debonair creator, puts it, "You might say Ray's been known to get the vapors."

Moreover, Ray Burr has fought the seemingly interminable battle of the bulge. He is now pushing 265 pounds although his studio likes to maintain the fiction of 230. In the Age of Perry, Today, discounting do-good junkets, he divides his time between San Francisco locations, an apartmentlike dressing suite at the splashiest and smoggiest studio in Hollywood, a friend's home near the studio, and a 4000-acre Fiji isle called Naitaubu, of which he owns a tidy chunk.

"I live around," he says cagily. Then: "I let all that go. The animals went to the Los Angeles Zoo—I see them from time to time. I have five friends who have gardens I work from time to time. And I have friends I don't get invited to visit unless I cook. You're kind of a shell—they're inviting you not for the kind of person you are but for what you do. That's fine!"

But what is so fine about plunging into yet another bone-bruising, full-hour TV series, distinguishable from any other only by a mechanical gimmick and its talented star? "To be able to spend five months of the year in the U.S., at least a month traveling, and to live six months in the Fiji Islands," says Ray. "It also enables me to do some things in the future that I can't do now. I am very rich, but I don't have a large bank account. My big dream is getting to a point where I don't give a hoot-or-holler where money is concerned, areas having to do with giving. I want to be free to give, to exist, to live."

"I feel I have enough of the good years left for that, and I don't feel I'm prostituting myself one single bit. I still want to grow a nice garden and have a family around me, and I'd like to do a great play. If I'm successful with the series, I can then walk away from it all and be completely a free agent. I want to be encumbered, but I want to be freer not to have to worry about my encumbrances." A thoughtful pause, then: "I don't know what a man is on earth for if he hasn't done it all."

THE SERGEANT'S HARD CLIMB FROM THE RANKS

How Ivan Dixon made it from Harlem to 'Hogan's Heroes'

In the late Thirties and early Forties a little roly-poly black youngster who answered to the name of "Fats" Dixon used to pay another kid a nickle a day to occupy his seat in school while Fats was hanging out in the Apollo Theater in the heart of Harlem. It was a vaudeville house in those days and Fats idolized the Negro musicians and the glittery, gaudy lives they led. Between the stage shows were Negro cowboy movies—quickies, with scenery falling down all around the actors—cheapies, shown only in "colored" theaters, mostly in the South. Fats despised those shoddy black Westerns; no dignity, no class.

"My idea of a hero was Joe Louis because he beat up white folks and because he did it with dignity, a kind of crude grace, the way he'd always step back a little before bombing into them."

Now in the late Sixties "Fats" isn't roly-poly any more; at 36 he's 6-foot-

1 and 195 pounds of hard sinew. He's known by his given name of Ivan Dixon and he's starting his third season in the continuing role of Sergeant Kinchloe in Hogan's Heroes; he's the recipient of an Emmy nomination for his acting in the CBS Playhouse drama "The Final War of Olly Winter"; he's in the ring with the white folks and he's all class.

There was a time of slim chance the boy would ever escape the grinding ghetto. "We were just out there in the streets. I'd have ended up a numbers runner today or be hatching schemes for making big loot for quick pleasures. But I got lucky. I got away at the age of 13."

His years on "the block"—130th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue—were not all that typical. For one thing, there was his extraordinary father, also named Ivan. "I never heard of anybody who called him anything but 'Mister Dixon.' He was a man of considerable convictions. He was a hero in World War I. When Negro troops were left as a holding action for white troops to withdraw, his whole battalion was wiped out except for him and the 23 men he led. He was awarded the croix de guerre.

"He regularly read the Jewish Daily Forward in Yiddish. He used to take me on the double-decker bus to visit Greenwich Village and the Battery Aquarium. He gave me dates, kumquats, and halvah—things the kids on the block never heard of. I think I never got mixed up with drugs because I didn't have to rebel. My father explained everything to me."

It was a broken family, though, with the parents separated. As a kid, Ivan worked for his father, making deliveries for his grocery store, meanwhile living at his mother's flat, where he paid his own share of the rent. "I was pretty much independent. I always worked—shining shoes, cleaning up a butcher shop, carrying groceries. My father never had to discipline me. He treated me as an equal. We were working buddies."

When it looked as though the slum environment was about to overwhelm the boy, his parents sent him away to a boarding school in a community in North Carolina where his grandfather, the first Ivan Dixon, had been a slave. "I have to admit the South had a positive effect on me. There, I was responsible for my actions, good or bad. I didn't have to behave grotesquely to get recognition. The code of the Harlem streets had been extremely competitive, but in North Carolina I found you didn't have to kill the other guys. There was a sense of somewhere to go together. In Harlem you're never invited to anybody's home to eat, only to drink. It was the opposite in North Carolina. One thing, though—down there I never knew any white people. I'm not saying I like segregation. But in the South it was easier for me to know what it was I had to fight. The lines were drawn."

Ivan Dixon has been fighting—and mostly winning—ever since. He got his B.A. degree in political science and history at North Carolina College. He won a Rockefeller Foundation grant for graduate work in drama at Western Reserve University. He studied at the American Theater Wing in New York. He got his start in television acting in six Studio One productions.

But his fight for dignity as a Negro seems to him about the same as in the days of the Apollo Theater—mostly uphill. "Two years ago we had no Negro in a continuing dramatic series on TV and we've still only got a few. Now they're starting to sprinkle a few Negroes in crowd scenes of commercials. My kids try to spot them, playing the game of 'There's one!' But by the time you look up, they've vanished from the screen."

Dixon and his wife, Berlie, whom he met at North Carolina College, live in suburban Altadena, Cal., with their four children, three of whom bear proud African names. The oldest is Ivan IV, 10; then N'Gai, 8, named for the Kikuyu deity; Kimara, 5, meaning "Child of God" in the language of the Yoruba; and Nomathande, 2, Xhosa for "Mother of Hope."

"At home I regularly give my kids lessons in Negro history. This year my oldest boy had to give a report in school on the captains of the ships with Columbus. Ivan let his class in on the fact that a black man piloted the 'Pinta.' Maybe you don't know that on the Chisholm Trail fully one-third of the 35,000 men were Negroes and Mexicans? Or that many, many of the early cowboys were black?"

"Berlie said I was overdoing it when I had to straighten out one of my boys; he was the only one in his class to draw a black George Washington."

Lest We Remember

Or, Good Grief, That's Skip Homeier!

BY PETER E. PRICE

Television is the great leveler. You may begin in a sitting position, but before long the urge to stretch out becomes irresistible. And this, it seems to me, is as it should be. Television as pure escape is the scandal and despair of professional critics; these must number in the hundreds, but they are men and women who sleep till noon and whose central gripe, after all, is that Rod Serling neither thinks nor writes like Goethe.

Men like myself (numbering in the millions), shambling home at dusk from the quartz diggings, bring later to the set, and the settee, minds and bodies well along toward the end of the daily tether. We are not looking to be disturbed. Not that we're all necessarily low-brows. But in the main, it is solace we seek. And—till one dark night last summer—it was solace, without qualification. Then

I remember that I was arranged on my side, like an opium addict, on the couch. The attraction was a re-gallop of one of those 1950-vintage Westerns, with Wyatt Earp or Bat Masterson or Chuck Connors in one of his several sideburned incarnations running things. The Westerns of those days were ground out to the time-honored recipe. The principal Bad Guys wore mustaches, which was a help if you tuned in late, and they shot people or stole horses or cracked safes because they were Bad Guys and these were the ways they got their jollies. (The Social Disorientation approach to the Younger boys and Billy the Kid was all in the future.)

Anyhow, I was sort of drifting off, just watching the Back at the Hide-out scene out of half of one eye. In case you've forgotten, the Back at the Hide-out scene was a transitional, rather static interlude, but a vital one, between the First and Second (or final) Confrontation. The head Bad Guy—Denver Pyle or Lee Van Cleef or Robert J. Wilke—has just staggered away from the First Confrontation, bruised and bloodied by the hero ("You haven't heard the last of me, Masterson!"). Why Bat does not kill the Bad Guy at this point is never made clear, but he never does, and the next scene is Back at the Hide-out. Now follows a lot of losers'-locker-room grumbling and threatening by the head Bad Guy and his flunkies. There is little or no action; the whole sequence is by way of a breather for Bad Guy, Good Guy and viewer.

The Second Confrontation to follow is nothing but action: Not only does Wyatt or Bat belatedly exterminate the Bad Guys—with or without the help of an aroused or cowardly citizenry—in the obligatory street fight, but cross fire ties up all the little loose ends of the plot by disposing of such peripheral characters as the ambivalent dance-hall girl who was no better than she had to be; the once fearless lawman who lost his sand; and the town drunk. The latter is usually harmless and neutral, but he must be killed—perhaps as a warning to young viewers that such are the wages of dissipation. In any event, it is unthinkable that a show of this genre could conclude without J. Pat O'Malley or Edgar Buchanan twitching terminally by the watering trough.

But to return to the night in question and Back at the Hide-out. I was idly sizing up the second-string Bad Guys, all of whom had, I knew, about nine minutes to live, when the face of one of them held my gaze. It was an unremarkable face—narrow and furtive—but I had seen it before, somewhere. I swung my legs off the couch and sat up, the better to concentrate, and the question might be dogging my dreams to this minute had not he taken that moment to deliver himself of the one line the script tossed, bonelike, at his boots. I have forgotten the surly sentiments themselves, but the voice tripped the stubborn gate of my memory, and I said aloud (my wife tells me): "Bobby Jordan!"

Now that may not be a name to stand with Bogey or Brando or Leonid Kinskey in the Hollywood Hall of Fame, but it had been a mighty name in my—and Bobby's—youth. Here, far past that youth, and obviously come to no good end, was the pride of the Dead End Kids. Tall (if only by comparison), bright-eyed and bushy-haired, Bobby had been the conscience of that otherwise delinquent sextet ("You shoonta stabbed that cop, Tommy!") that Warner Brothers had featured in half a dozen slum melodramas of my teens. Through every crisis—despite the serpentine persuasions of Leo Gorcey and the random hammerings of Huntz Hall—he had not lost his ethico-moral cool!

The Dead End Kids had inevitably become Dead End Adults, in spite of Hollywood's resources. Sometimes recast as a comic rather than a melodramatic phalanx, the group dragged along for a few years, and then, as far as I know, dispersed, to be seen no more. Until this moment; until this shocking reunion with a Bobby gone bad: a heavy in a formula Western A skinny heavy, to be sure, but a heavy for all that. I watched him writhing in the dust now (slightly upstaged by Edgar Buchanan) with an icy calm. Then I walked over and switched off the set—not in time, unfortunately, to forbear seeing the credits, which listed a Robert Jordan as the final entry in a 15-name cast. Robert, indeed! The final indignity.

So it was that I came to watch television with, at once, a new fascination and a new uneasiness. I did not have long to wait for a second jolt. This time the vehicle was "The Seaview," the show Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea. Now, as any watcher of this show knows, Admiral Richard Basehart has had the most agonized command since Philip Queeg was frog-marched off the quarter-deck of the Caine. (The Seaview might be renamed "Poor Richard's 'Merrimac.'") In the episode I saw, Basehart and crew were in the fell clutches of a distinctly wayward U.S. senator with unusual extrasensory powers and unusually base intentions.

The story did not and does not concern me—Basehart won out, though just by a hair, and by show's end had regained all of his old cheerlessness. (Come to think of it, he's been pretty moody ever since Anthony Quinn put the blocks to him in "La Strada," 11 years ago.) It was the identity of the lean and loony legislator that concerned me, for the narrow, tense face had rung another bell, à la Bobby Jordan, in my memory. A quick rattle through TV GUM and I had my answer: "God-help-us-and-save-us," said-old-Mrs.-Davis—it was Skip Homeier!

Oh, the credits gave his name as G. V. Homeier, but it was good old Skip all right—gangling youth of my gang-ling youth! Inside that mad and middle-aging senator, a Skip was trying to get out!

I remember sinking slowly to a sitting position on a cocktail table. There is no mirror like an old Skip, someone has said. Why, we had been boys together—he on the screen, and I slumped before it, wolfing down jujubes, true, but in a very special sense we had been boys together, and together we had weathered full many a teen-age trauma. How often had I watched his self-conscious and laughably (though not to me, not to me) ineffective courting in cruel enlargement on the silver screen while, 20 feet away and 20 times smaller, I helplessly aped his ineptitude with a bored majorette. And now he was out making life difficult for Richard Basehart. And me—what might Skip, or rather G.V. (his Skiptitude discarded like antlers), make of me?

I remember walking to the set again, and turning it off. Hoss would have to handle things at the Ponderosa without me this Sunday!

It is an irony worthy of Balzac. The great soother—television—has come to us weary, huddled masses all right, but there is a joker. TV is not the movies, is not Hollywood. Hollywood had child stars and adult stars, and the former seldom grew into the latter, and then only at their peril (Judy Garland, Mickey Rooney). The movies made its use of its Freddie Bartholomews and its Tommy Bupps and its June Preissers, and that was the end of it.

For my part, I hope they are all very happily and prosperously retired somewhere, all of them. But I don't want to see them now, past their Bupp-hood, middle-aged and lined. Who needs a 43-year-old Ann Ruth-erford turning up at the drive-in? As one slips a bursitic right arm around his wife's shoulders, wouldn't it be too callously cruel to have enter the screen, at that pivotal moment, the faithful old family retainer played by Scotty Beckett?

But with television—with its insatiable maw, never getting enough of ideas and stories and men and women—it is another story. Those whom a wise and prudential Hollywood has put to occupational rest need only turn up with a Screen Actors Guild card, and it is good-by Charlie and peace-of-mind for a million viewers with memories longer than they care to acknowledge.

It is a TV we can thank for the apparition of an arch-matronly Jane Withers, hawking Comet and subtly reminding her watching contemporaries that they may not live to see Halley's. Television, too, must take the responsibility for seizing upon the Green, Raw Recruit to end all Green, Raw Recruits—Marshall Thompson—and not only parading him around as a mature professional man (as "Daktari" he reminds me of no one so much as of Jimmy Stewart playing Albert Schweitzer), but—the last turn of the knife—providing him with an eminently full-grown daughter! But for the equatorial lethargy of the bush, Marshall would be a grandfather already—and we were kids, in Basic, together!

We can live with the other side of the coin: For some reason, it is not analogously depressing to recognize, in a Depression-made movie, the bit players in a tennis-match background to be, say, a bouncy Marie Ouspenskaya and a young-grad S.Z. ("Cuddles") Sakall. That will wash. To sum it up in a phrase: Elisha Cook Sr.—si; Elisha Cook III—never!

And is it a lot to ask—that we middle-aging millions be not confronted by Skips off the old Homeier? We know already, and too well, for whom the muffled drums of Daktari's interns toll.

When Ford built this $100,000 GT, they weren't about to scrimp on spark plugs. So they got Autolite plugs. Like you buy.

About $1 each.

Last year, the Ford GT became the first American car ever to win the grueling 24-hour Le Mans race. (This year, another Ford GT did it again — to make it two in a row.) It's probably the finest racing car that $100,000 can buy. The transmission alone cost $25,000. The engine cost as much as a small house. And the spark plugs? About one dollar a throw. They're Autolite plugs. The same kind you buy.

Why one dollar Autolite spark plugs in a $100,000 car?

Because there are no better plugs. Not at any price.

Put this kind of spark plug in your kind of car. Whatever kind you drive.

Autolite... the only name you need to know for spark plugs, batteries, filters, shock absorbers and complete ignition systems.

Answer to Sept. 2 puzzle

Big screen color tv for $299.95* How can it be?

A reasonable question.

After all, the price for big-screen color tv has usually been about five or six hundred dollars. And now Philco-Ford starts running ads for big-screen color tv at a price you'd expect to pay for a portable.

$299.95* for something that usually costs five or six hundred? You have to wonder a little.

Like how big is the big screen?

Big. 267 square inches to be exact. Big enough for the whole family to look at comfortably from the other side of the room.

Of course, size alone doesn't make it good. And if you've been wondering about that, think about this.

It has a 26,000-volt chassis. The same as we put in sets costing hundreds more. And the same solid-state tuning system. And solid-copper printed circuits, pre-set fine tuning, transistorized 3-stage amplifier and balanced-color control circuitry. All just like you'd find on our most expensive sets.

Still, all that technical stuff might really not mean very much to you. So forget about it.

And remember this. All the components, all the parts, all the things which go into making this $299.95 color tv set are protected by the very same warranty that we put on color television sets costing over eight hundred dollars.

All of which leads to another question.

Simply, "How come it costs so little?"

Because the cabinet is simple. Which is another way of saying that it isn't made of fancy woods and veneers. Or rubbed and polished by well-paid little men the way many of our more expensive models are. This cabinet is simply trim and attractive.

Of course, all these questions, how good, how big and how good- or plain-looking, are best answered by going to your Philco dealer's and looking at one.

But just remember, it is big-screen color tv. And it is made by Philco-Ford.

So don't let the price scare you.

Yes, everything's in there, including a solid-state tuning system and 26,000-volt chassis; all covered by the same warranty we put on sets costing hundreds more.
